Art Unit: 1637

1. Restriction to one of the following inventions is required under 35 U.S.C. 121:
 - I. Claims 54-83 and 86, drawn to 16S-23S rRNA spacer nucleic acids and a method of detection thereof, classified in class 435, subclass 6, for example.
 - II. Claims 84 and 85, drawn to a composition and kit comprising a sequencing primer that hybridizes with a 16S-23S rRNA spacer nucleic acid, classified in class 536, subclass 24.33.
 - III. Claims 87 and 88, drawn to a composition and kit comprising a taxon-specific probe that hybridizes with a 16S-23S rRNA spacer nucleic acid, classified in class 536, subclass 24.32.

The inventions are distinct, each from the other because of the following reasons:

The nucleic acids of each of groups I, II, and III are distinct as having different lengths, purposes, and physical properties. Group I is drawn to complete rRNA spacer sequences; group II is drawn to sequencing primers; group III is drawn to detection probes. Full length sequences may be used for homology studies; primers may be used for extension and amplification; probes may be used for hybridization detection. Thus, each of the groups is patentably distinct over the others.

Sequence Election Requirement Applicable to All Groups

In addition, each Group detailed above reads on patentably distinct Groups drawn to multiple SEQ ID Numbers. The sequences are patentably distinct because they are unrelated sequences, and a further restriction is applied to each Group. For an elected Group drawn to nucleotide sequences, the Applicants are permitted to elect up to 10 nucleic acid sequences (See MPEP 803.04); in this particular case, applicant must elect a sequence or sequences specific to a particular species/genus. In other words, a sequence or small set of sequences as set forth in any one of claims 60-81 must be elected.

MPEP 803.04 states:

Nucleotide sequences encoding different proteins are structurally distinct chemical compounds and are unrelated to one another. These sequences are thus deemed to normally constitute independent and distinct inventions within the meaning of 35 U.S.C. 121. Absent evidence to the contrary, each such nucleotide sequence is presumed to represent an independent and distinct invention, subject to a restriction requirement pursuant to 35 U.S.C. 121 and 37 CFR 1.141 et seq. Nevertheless, to further aid the biotechnology industry in protecting its intellectual property without creating an undue burden on the Office, the Commissioner has decided sua sponte to partially waive the requirements of 37 CFR 1.141 et seq. and permit a reasonable number of such nucleotide sequences to be claimed in a single application. See Examination of Patent Applications Containing Nucleotide Sequences, 1192 O.G. 68 (November 19, 1996).

It has been determined that normally ten sequences constitute a reasonable number for examination purposes. Accordingly, in most cases, up to ten independent and distinct nucleotide sequences will be examined in a single application without restriction. In addition to the specifically selected sequences, those sequences which are patentably indistinct from the selected sequences will also be examined. Furthermore, nucleotide sequences encoding the same protein are not considered to be independent and distinct inventions and will continue to be examined together.

Because these inventions are distinct for the reasons given above and have acquired a separate status in the art as shown by their different classification, restriction for examination purposes as indicated is proper.

2. Applicant is advised that the reply to this requirement to be complete must include an election of the invention to be examined even though the requirement be traversed (37 CFR 1.143).
3. Applicant is reminded that upon the cancellation of claims to a non-elected invention, the inventorship must be amended in compliance with 37 CFR 1.48(b) if one or more of the currently named inventors is no longer an inventor of at least one claim remaining in the application. Any amendment of inventorship must be accompanied by a request under 37 CFR 1.48(b) and by the fee required under 37 CFR 1.17(i).
